Bank on fine weather for holiday Monday

25 August 2000

Release number 426

Met. Office forecasters are confidently predicting that bank holiday Monday will be dry with sunny intervals across the bulk of the UK. However, an area of low pressure will move steadily northwards during the weekend, bringing a period of widespread thundery showers, particularly in the west of the UK.

Drier and brighter weather will spread to most areas by Sunday.

Clive Brimacombe, Manager of The Met. Office's National Meteorological Centre, said: "We are optimistic that after a short break in the fine spell on Saturday, dry and bright weather will return for the rest of the bank holiday."
